Anna Russell, Director of the Bupa Foundation, said:

"We're delighted to announce this year's Green Community Grants recipients. As our investment reaches £1.7 million over four years, we continue to back community-led projects that bring people closer to nature, improve wellbeing and help create greener, healthier communities. Congratulations to all of our 2026 grantees, whose passion and commitment are helping create healthier places for healthier people."

The Bupa Foundation Green Community Grants Fund is administered by the national community charity, Groundwork.

Graham Duxbury, Groundwork's UK Chief Executive, said:

"It's well established that making our towns and cities greener is one of the best ways of improving health and protecting our communities from the impacts of climate change. We also know that giving people the tools and resources to lead change in their local area can deliver huge social benefits. That's why we're delighted to be working with the Bupa Foundation to support local groups across the country to deliver projects that matter to them."
